Coroner Story of Plaquemines parish reached the city today. He said that it was impossible to picture the situation in his parish, where the death list is so long. Men, women and children are starving, and hundreds of corpses are still unburied on the river banks. Since the storm occurred the doctor has been doing nothing but viewing corpses. He was sickened at the fearful sight of the coronomosing, bodies which he was compelled to view, and came to this city this evening for rest. He said that he had finally given up that task, as the bodies were so numerous. Dr. Story says that the swamps are filled with dead bodies, which it is almost impossible to reach.

"There can be no doubt," said the doctor, "that this is conducive to an epidemic of fever, or even of choiera. It a case of State Convention to Discuss the Subject be Held in Wichlts.

This important and grave question is receiving much attention from the press of the state and from prominent individuals in all parts of the country. Steps have been taken to hold a state convention on the subject in this city, and a committee met in this city last night and fixed the date as Nov. 22, 1833. This committee was composed of D. M. Frost of Garden City, president of the Kansas Irrigation association; E. B. Cowgill of Topeks, editor of the Kansas Farmer, secretary, and George W. Clement, member of the executive committee. Representation will be fixed about as follows: Two from each ward in cities of the first class; three from each city of the second class; two from each city of the third class, and four from each commissioner district. Each railroad corporation will be allowed three delegates, and all civil engineers in the state will be entitled to seats in the convention, Invitations will be extended to all manufacturers to exhibit the latest improved irrigating machinery, windmills, and all devices for raising water.

The importance of this subject to Wichita can hardly be estimated. The committee will formulate a program embracing papers covering every phase of the subject, and these papers will be prepared by men thoroughly posted on the subject. Arrangements will be perfected and efforts made to have a large and enthusiastic convention. The work of advertising will be pushed vigorously.

MUTINOUS SEPOYS.

LONDON, Oct. 7 .- A dispatch to the Times from Calcutta says that a serious disturbance occurred at Cabul, capital of Afghanistan, previous to the arrival there of the mission under command of Sir Mortimer Durand. The assistant commander in chief, it appears, abused a sepoy of a Herat regiment, upon which the regiment, becoming terribly enraged, loaded their rifles and fired a volley, killloaded their rifles and fired a volley, kill-ing the assistant commander in chief. The muthous sepoys fled from Cabul, but were pursued and captured by the ameer's loyal troops. A number of the mutineers were tried by court martial. Eleven were sentenced to be blown to pieces from field guns, and the sentence was promptly car-ried into effect. Further disturbances are feared. General Faramus Khan has been arrested, and other arrests are in progress. arrested, and other arrests are in progress.

ANTARCTIC PENGUINS.

Penguins are the strangest creatures ever seen. They are supremely funny as they quack and strut about with their padded feet over the snow, or,

coming to a slope, glide swiftly downward toboggan-fashion upon their breasts. If one lands on the piece of ice they are resting upon, they approach fearlessly with a threatening

"Quack! quack!" For their inquisitive ness they, too, often received the handle of the club, for it was soon found that their flesh greatly resembled that of the hare, and upon them we had many a tasty and substantial meal. The emperor penguin is very difficult to kill; he will live after his skull has been most hopelessly smashed; the best way to put an end to them is to pith them. Six of us one

BIG FIRES IN THE SUN.

Disturbances Which Materially Affected the Weather on This Planet Recently. Tremendous fires on the sun's surface, exceeding in size and intensity anything measurable by human understanding, recently drew the attention of all astronomers. This description was given by Astronomer Garrett P.

"A stupendous group of black spots, easily visible to the naked eye when the latter is protected by a dark glass, was on the meridian of the sun. No less than twelve smaller groups of spots were visible on the dish at the same time, so that the appearance of the sun's face was most extraordinary when viewed with a telescope. The large group is in the southern hemisphere, and is probably a reappearance of a huge spot seen at previous times. It showed two main centers of activity, and the area of the solar surface covered by it was not less than 3,000,000,000 square miles. The western nucleus of the group presented a vast circular pool, the center of which was as black as ink. The diameter of the black center was not less than fourteen thousand miles, but its outlines were broken by fiery bridges projecting into and across it. One of these, whose length could not have been less than ten thousand miles, was seemingly split in two from end to end, while another vast curving line of flame ran in and across the pit to join it. The eastern nucleus was still larger, and showed a marvelous mass of black chasm crossed and divided in every direction by blazing tongues and bridges. Around the edge of the great group eruptions of metallic vapor were evidently taking place, lifting masses of blazing mat ter to the height of many thousand miles. Changes in the details of some of the spots indicated that the most tremendous forces were at work. Philadelphia Record.

THE HABIT OF DRUDGERY.

Some Advantages and Otherwise of Having a Distinguished Brother. Since my brother Mundanus has become rich and famous as the author and autocrat of the bootjack trust, I have been very strongly tempted to stop working for myself and arrange with him for my support, says a writer in Scribner's. It may be that I shall conclude that the habit of drudgery is too firmly fixed on me to be thrown off with impunity, so that perhaps I shall elect to go on working; but if I do it will be in the nature of self-indulgence, maintained for more personal ease. against my conviction of what is just For my argument is, and it is conceived on general and impersonal grounds, and founded without prejudice on dispassionate observation, that work is a very moderate set-off to any ordinary man for the inconvenience and detriment of having an immoderciety to measure brothers by the same standard. When they are little society puts them back to back and observes grown it piles their achievements or renown or incomes up side by side, and remarks which pile is bigger. Mr. Rockefeller's or Mr. Astor's income may run up into the millons, without making anyone think the worse of my capacity; but ever since it became known that Mundanus was getting fifty thousand dollars a year largely payable in Bootjack stock, as I happen to know, but the public doesn't), it has been imputed to me as a fault, and somewhat of a disgrace, that my in-takings were not so large. However conscientiously a man may have used the talents given him, and whatever progress he may have made in life, if it be his misfortune to have a meteoric brother who has sailed conspicuous where he has had to plod, and arrived glorious where he has sweated in patient aspiration, the slow-gaited man is bound to suffer as I do by disparaging comparison with his ocupod fellow of the same brood.

paper astonished the world with a fabored attempt to account for the cause of this dislike to us. But the reason is a very simple one.

We English are by no means a lovable race. We have many admirable qualities. We are a hardy, practical, persevering people; but these are not in themselves sympathetic properties. We are aggressive, self-assertive, purse-proud and hypocritical. We are apt to sing psalms and pick pockets at one and the same time, and our neighbors, not altogether unjustly, therefore, resent the over-righteous tone that we adopt in criticising them and their concerns.

Wherever the Englishman goes he has the fatal influence of spoiling even the most simple of characters. A few British tourists will make the inhabitants of the most inexperienced provdice on dispassionate observation, that ince shrewd, suspicious, grasping and a comfortable maintenance without dishonest. This is within the common knowledge of any who have traveled in little-visited lands, and a consideration of this phenomenon will enable us ately successful brother. The reason the better, perhaps, to understand why lies in the incorrigible tendency of so- our neighbors, and more especially the French, so heartily detest us It is also a curious fact that whenever there are any general elections to be which is the taller. When they are held in the great republics the most popular policy is to twist the tail of the British lion. It would be instructive as a subject for the dull season to discuss the question: "Are we English really much superior to all other nations?" I think we are, but apparently our neighbors think otherwise; and it might be well, therefore, to discover whether we are mistaken or whether they are stupidly prejudiced.

A WOMAN'S RESPONSIBILITY. The Study of Household Science as a Help to Proper Management.

It is woman's province to control and manage the household. Whether she does it wisely or unwisely rests with herself. No one else can absolutely fill her place. She should, therefore, study the phases of home affairs with the same application and assiduity that she would give to a difficult problem, which may require weeks, months, even years, to work out, but which in the end must be solved. A man enters the arena of business with the full purpose of being master of whatever he undertakes. He knows that he must succeed. Reputation, social position, comfort, progress, the happiness of his family, even life itself, may depend upon his efforts. If woman would feel the same responsibility SEFORE AND AFTER USING
